The post-Zuma season will be a bitter and cold winter. Perish the thought that he might see jail time – these matters will be in court for an excruciatingly long time, writes Imran Buccus.

ANC members have been following the proceedings and are keen about how he did not want to stay and watch the nearly 400 pages of evidence. Mike Mabuyakhulu has been a competent and fair judge as well as an experienced one. What Zuma might be looking forward to is that he will have a chance to return to his country and party work. His supporters have been waiting for him to speak again in the same way that he has had to be patient in the courtrooms and in prison. His loudhailers tone down or jump ship altogether. Others, like Sihle Zikalala, are smart enough to realize that they have to have a plan B. He might be in a position to say that the ANC is free to come to see him just like that... Plus, he has never been the most powerful. The song, which means ‘the song that will go on for ever’, says: ‘Nkosi Sikelelwa Nkulunkulu.’

But what about the future? Zuma may have been a president with a cultural personality that latches on to the seemingly untouchable Ka Madiba-Zuma, who entered the world of politics after the liberation from the 28-year-long incarceration in the Robben Island prison. He's come out trumps in many challenges along the way. Zuma is that guy that gets into problems every now and then, but never gets into the deep end. He's the guy who has never been accused of corruption.
