Morocco: Human Rights, Social Justice, and Cultural Transformations

This syllabus is representative of a typical semester. Because courses develop and change over time to take advantage of unique learning opportunities, actual course content varies from semester to semester.

Course Description
This seminar offers students the opportunity to learn how historically situated and currently unfolding human rights and social justice are claimed and promoted in Morocco, and to increase their awareness, knowledge, and social justice advocacy. It engages critically, through an intersectional lens drawing on the humanities, social sciences, and fine arts, with a range of injustices in a number of domains including gender, identity, individual liberties, class, the environment, land, etc. It seeks to develop a holistic understanding of human rights and social justice.

The seminar will explore the ways Morocco constitutes the ideal site to study the increasing visibility in the public sphere of the issues of human rights and social justice and their inscription on the agendas of social movements. Furthermore, it will demonstrate the ways Human Rights and Social Justice movements present a rich and diverse model in Morocco, one that reflects domestic, regional, and international influences. Finally, it will discuss how 2011 uprisings and the cultural transformations that followed them played an important role in expanding the demands and the repertoires of struggles against different forms oppression and marginalization. The seminar engages Moroccan academics, artists, civil society activists, policy makers and students in debates on the development of a multicultural society in a political hybrid regime.

Learning Outcomes
Upon completion of the course, students will be able to:

- Identify from both a theoretical and practical standpoint the concepts of human rights social justice, and cultural transformations in the contemporary Moroccan context;
- Analyze current issues related to the development of individual and public liberties in Morocco regarding the spheres of human rights, religion, society, culture, and politics;
• Show familiarity with the work of institutions and NGOs in the areas of human rights and social justice;
• Demonstrate understanding of the social justice movements shaping the public debate agenda in Morocco;
• Explain the impact of neo-liberal policies and protest movements on the development of the culture of social justice and human rights in Morocco;

Language of Instruction
This course is taught in English, but students will be simultaneously learning Modern Standard Arabic and expected to engage community members in this language (to the best of their abilities) when the opportunity arises.

Instructional Methods
SIT’s teaching and learning philosophy is grounded in the experiential learning theory developed by Kolb (1984; 2015) and informed by various scholars, such as Dewey, Piaget, Lewin, among others. Experiential learning theory recognizes that learning is an active process that is not confined to the formal curriculum; “knowledge is created through the transformation of experience” (Kolb, 2015, p. 49). Learning involves both content and process. Learning is holistic and happens through various life experiences upon which students draw to generate new ways of knowing and being. Learning involves a community and is a lifelong endeavor. Learning is transformational. The suggested four step-cycle of a concrete experience, reflective observation, abstract conceptualization, and active experimentation embedded in the experiential learning model is not linear and might not always happen in that specific order, as any learning is highly context dependent. These stages of taking part in a shared experience; reflecting on that experience by describing and interpreting it; challenging their own assumptions and beliefs to generate new knowledge; and ultimately applying new knowledge, awareness, skills, and attitudes in a variety of situations and contexts are important for students to engage in to become empowered lifelong learners.

Assignments and Evaluation

Assignment Descriptions and Grading Criteria

1) Module Synthesis Session (20%)
Students sign up in groups of 3 or 4 for either of the modules in this seminar and provide a panel presentation in which they bring together theoretical and country-specific insights into the impact of social movements and neo-liberal policies on the development of human rights in Morocco. All students should prepare for class discussion and have at least one question or comment ready for the panel. Though students prepare the presentation in a group, each student is individually evaluated on the basis of the clarity of thought and argumentation in their presentation and response to the questions from the audience.
2) Midterm Paper (30%)
The Midterm Paper should be approximately 3 pages long and should be based primarily on library sources (e-resources included). The theme of the paper should be inspired by the lectures and the readings assigned and should have an introduction, clear statement of the argument, conceptual framework, and current circumstances of the issue. Justify the selection of your topic if it seems unrelated to the wordings of the module or session titles or the readings.

3) Final paper (40%)
The Final Paper should be approximately 5 to 6 pages long and should reflect primarily on a prominent problem dealt within the semester such as the limitations of human rights implementation in a hybrid regime, the challenges of women’s empowerment in a conservative and authoritarian system, impact of neoliberal policies on the equitable distribution of resources or the challenges of addressing poverty and employment in peripheral regions. Students are also encouraged to choose a topic and area of research that they would later develop in their independent study project. Besides a clear statement of the argument, the paper should also review some of the relevant literature (4 to 5 articles).

4) Participation (10%)
Participation in class refers to attendance, punctuality, attentive listening, and active engagement in all lectures, discussions, educational excursions, assignments, and other activities. It also means polite and respectful behavior. An absent student is responsible for contacting the instructor, the tutor, and/or fellow students to be prepared for the assignments s/he missed and the ones scheduled for the next class.

Attendance and Participation
An “A” grade for an assignment entails superior (not just “very good”) performance in terms of structure and organization of assignments, analysis, logical argumentation and consistency, and the provision of factual, numerical, and/or historical evidence. In terms of class participation, an “A” grade refers to full attendance, punctuality, attentive listening, and active engagement in all academic seminar lectures, discussions, field trips, and other activities. It also means polite and respectful behavior. The level, frequency, and quality of student participation will be monitored and taken into account.

Late Assignments
Timely completion of all assignments is expected. Late hand-ins will be penalized. All assignments are evaluated according to organization, analytical quality, depth of understanding, argumentation, and presentation of evidence.

Program Expectations

- Show up prepared. Be on time, have your readings completed and points in mind for discussion or clarification. Complying with these elements raises the level of class discussion for everyone.
- Have assignments completed on schedule, printed, and done accordingly to the specified requirements. This will help ensure that your assignments are returned in a timely manner.
- Ask questions in class. Engage the lecturer. These are often very busy professionals who are doing us an honor by coming to speak.
- Comply with academic integrity policies (no plagiarism or cheating, nothing unethical).
- Respect differences of opinion (classmates’, lecturers, local constituents engaged with on the visits). You are not expected to agree with everything you hear, but you are expected to listen across difference and consider other perspectives with respect.

SIT Policies and Resources

Please refer to the SIT Study Abroad Handbook and the Policies section of the SIT website for all academic and student affairs policies. Students are accountable for complying with all published policies. Of particular relevance to this course are the policies regarding: academic integrity, Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act (FERPA), research and ethics in field study and internships, late assignments, academic status, academic appeals, diversity and disability, sexual harassment and misconduct, and the student code of conduct.

Please refer to the SIT Study Abroad Handbook and SIT website for information on important resources and services provided through our central administration in Vermont, such as Library resources and research support, Disability Services, Counseling Services, Title IX information, and Equity, Diversity, and Inclusion resources.

Course Schedule
*Please be aware that topics and excursions may vary to take advantage of any emerging events, to accommodate changes in our lecturers’ availability, and to respect any changes that would affect student safety. Students will be notified if this occurs.

Module 1: Human Rights and Social justice in the Context of a Hybrid Political System

This module offers an overview of institutional arrangements, tactics, and strategies of accommodation and coercion used by hybrid systems. The focus is on the interface between state interests, the agenda of political parties and institutions, and the claims of social movements and civil society organizations in the advance of human rights and the transition towards a more democratic system of governance. The module engages with the human rights issues in the context of post-Arab Spring social-political dynamics in Morocco and regional geopolitics and elaborates on the methods of assessment, monitoring, and advocacy of these rights.

Sessions may include:
- Debating Human Rights Indicators and Development Indicators
- Role of political parties and political institutions in a hybrid system;
- Debating social justice, human and cultural rights in a hybrid regime;
- Cooptation and contestation in a hybrid regime: power and limitations of civil society;
- The cultural construction of human rights in Morocco;
- The politics of protest and resistance in a hybrid regime;
- Environmental rights
- Land Rights
- Language rights and policy in the Moroccan context.

Module 2: Social Justice Movements and Political Change in a Hybrid System

The focus is on the new generation of social justice movements and their tactics of mobilization and resistance in the face of a hybrid and semi-authoritarian system. The module discusses the notion of hogra (a feeling of humiliation and indignation by one’s inability to address injustice) and social justice in mobilizing contestation and resistance against corruption, poverty, and disenfranchisement. The aim is to analyze how social movements, including the protests of the unemployed, the women land rights movements, the environmental rights movements, the uprisings of hirak al-Rif, and LGBTQ movement, negotiate social and political change in the context of a hybrid regime.

The sessions will take up the following points:
- Hogra protests and contestation: organization and mobilization;
- New social movements: from Tansiqqiyyat to Hirak -al-Rif;
- The making and un-making of leaders of the protest movements;
• Advocacy of cultural rights movements: the Amazigh as a case study;
• Activism in an authoritarian system: LGBTQ movement as a case study;
• Individual liberties and state control: MALI movement.
• Researching NGOs
• Introduction to the Fieldwork assignment

Module 3: Gendering Citizenship: Women’s Rights and Constitutional Reform in Morocco
This module focuses on women’s human and legal rights in Morocco. The focus is on women’s struggles in the aftermath of the 2011 Constitution. Sessions grapple with the role of civil society in leading social and political change in the areas of the Family Code, inheritance rights, equal pay, and child labor. The module also addresses the legal and social struggles against violence against women. The sessions are based on a diverse selection of readings that include theoretical articles, practitioner perspectives, and primary source texts of international and national laws. During the rural homestay, students observe and discuss the condition of rural women in light of ongoing changes in Morocco.

Sessions may include:
- After the 2004 Mudawana: rethinking the Moroccan family code;
- Law and practice: legal impediments to women’s empowerment;
• Human rights and violence against women;
• Civil society and women’s rights: local and international NGOs;
• Marriage and citizenship: the struggle for equal rights;
• Women and labor rights in a patriarchal neo-liberal context;
• Empowering rural women: are microfinance projects the answer?
• Women entrepreneurs and social change.

Module 4: Youth Rights and Activism in Morocco

This module aims to introduce students to the main current trends and debates regarding youth rights and activism in Morocco – where young people are constantly torn between social, collective marginality, and the individual economic quest for autonomy. The module analyzes the structural factors that shape the lives of young people including 2011 constitutional reforms and the national integrated youth strategy. The focus is on the February 20 movement, activism, and the struggle for inclusion. The module also includes a round table discussion with Moroccan university students.

Sessions may include:
- Youth and social change: mobilization and contestation;
- Youth and political institutions: the 20 February movement;
- Social media and youth activism;
- Youth and hip-hop: rhymed resistance;
- Gendering activism: young women protest leaders;
- Youth and processes of individuation in a hybrid context;
- Youth and social and political transition;
- The next generation: discussion with Moroccan university students.

Module 5: Neoliberalism, Inequalities, and Environmental Justice in Morocco

This module explores the relationship and impact of neoliberal policies on the social fabric in Morocco and ensuing protests and contestation movements. The failure of the National Initiative of Human Development (launched in 2005) in attenuating the impact of neoliberal policies on the poor and dispossessed has led to an increase in the ratio of the population “at risk” and intensification of social protests in peripheral regions. Despite the claims of government officials, the resources of the country do not seem to be distributed in an equitably way, which further jeopardizes the promulgation of economic and social rights. A central issue tackled in the module is environmental quality and social justice. Special attention will also be given to the ways climate change makes the Amazigh nomads’ search for water for their livestock harder day after day, as well as to the conflict between the nomads and the villagers who do not want them to camp on their lands. The module takes as axiomatic the premise that all people have a right to live in a clean environment free from hazardous pollution or contamination, and to the natural resources necessary to sustain health and livelihood. In some cases, these resources are air, soil or water.

Sessions may include:

- Neoliberal economy and protest movements: an overview;
- After the National Initiative of Human Development (INDH): poverty and protest in Morocco;
- Land Privatization, the Government ‘Green Morocco’ Policy and their Effects on Nomads’ Lifestyle
- Neoliberal policies and the social fabric in Morocco: the compensation fund and informal economy sector;
- Why, and through what social, political and economic processes, some people are denied this basic right?
- The intersection of climate justice and migration;
- Economic and social rights: trade unions and human rights;
- Social and environmental justice in the age of neoliberalism;
- Economic structural adjustment and unemployment;
- Is there a third alternative to the left and neoliberalism?

Module 6: Social Justice, Cultural Transformations and Contemporary Moroccan Visual Arts
This module focuses on Moroccan post-colonial art and the various aesthetic strategies of resistance developed by Moroccan artists to break away from the colonial ethnographic and exotic representations. Run in the form of a workshop, the module offers a critical introduction to the works of some of the most challenging 21st century Moroccan artists and their endeavors to effect change in the cultural sphere in Morocco. It invites students to engage with modernity/coloniality as a modality of control of the economy, culture, and knowledge as well as mastery of the senses and perceptions. It also calls upon them to consider the different manifestations of ‘decolonial aesthesis’. The seminar will discuss the political underpinnings of Moroccan art in the 21st century, and the socio-political conditions that shaped cultural production in the country. Art has always been a site of struggle over the issues of social justice and an important instrument for effecting cultural transformations. Despite the widespread state’s patronage of the arts, many artists have chosen to challenge their authorities through subversive movements and practices.

Sessions may include:
- Colonial vs. post-colonial art in Morocco: from resilience to resistance;
- Cultural heritage and “The School of the Sign” art movement;
- Cultural Transformations, Islamist movement and the arts;
